WE START EACH MORNING WITH A BLANK SHEET OF PAPER.

On our 5-colour Harris M300 web press, that sheet of paper is 34" wide, 14.8 kilometres long, and comes on a roll that weighs in at over half a ton. But that's not surprising. Because with Dolco professionals at the controls, the Harris is capable of printing about a million high quality pages every hour. And one of those pages just happens to be the one you're looking at right now.

"I've got the best of both worlds. I work for a new company that's got 116 years of experience."

James Green, Bell Advantage rep.

The business.
Bell Canada, Canada's largest business telecommunications company.

The challenges.
"The market has changed tremendously over the past two years. The businesses we're dealing with have become increasingly sophisticated and increasingly dependent on communications technology. So we've had to refocus the way we do business, becoming as much a partner as a supplier. And to be perfectly honest, this is a huge company, and it's been a huge transition. Of course, being that big means that we've got skills and resources that nobody else can touch, but we need to stay very focussed on marshalling them in the right direction."

The solution.
A newly-expanded Advantage™ portfolio for business, including teleworking, teleconferencing, and data solutions. Competitive savings on inbound and outbound calling. Increased accounting and cost breakdown capabilities. Regular contact with customers. Customized analysis of, and solutions designed for, individual customers' needs.

The results.
"This really is a new company. Because we're now faced with the same competitive challenges our business customers are. Just like them, our survival as a business depends on delivering the best products at the best prices. And as a result, not only are we more responsive, but we've also designed Advantage to be much more responsive to our customers' needs. If you run a business, any business, Advantage can make a difference to it. And I'll tell you right now - you combine the new attitude you'll find at Bell, with the incredible base of knowledge and resources and experience that has always been a part of this company, and I can bring solutions to the table that no other telecommunications company can touch."

New solutions for business. From the new Bell.

STAR

Strategic Asset Allocation

At Mackenzie, our headline players are the Industrial, Universal and Ivy mutual fund groups – all part of our STAR program.

But our team – including professional money managers, customer service specialists, fund administrators, and the independent financial advisors who represent us – is a leader because of great bench strength in all positions.

So while we're trying to achieve goals for our clients – we're also very solid on defense.

Which, as we've proven for more than 30 winning seasons, is a major league way to build financial independence for Canadians.

It's every hockey players' dream to win the Cup and proudly wear the ring - a tangible symbol that sustains every moment of glory and triumph. Some, like Henri Richard, were blessed winning a record 11 Stanley Cups, while the coveted ring eluded many great players such as Marcel Dionne, Gil Perreault, Jean Ratelle and Ray Bourque. Next to having Pour tout joueur une bague de la coupe Stanley est un trésor incommensurable. Chaque pierre de sa couronne est un éternel souvenir des moments qui ont mené à la coupe Stanley. Avec onze coupes Stanley, Henri Richard manque de doigts pour mettre ses succès en évidence alors que d'autres comme Marcel Dionne, Gilbert Perreault, Raymond Bourque et Jean Ratelle ont quitté le hockey bredouilles. Pour un joueur, la bague est cet emblème tangible de l'ultime victoire.

La tradition des bagues de la coupe Stanley est récente en comparaison de celle de la coupe

Rings of Success

Succès au doigt et à l'oeil

your name engraved on the Cup, getting that Stanley Cup ring is hockey's most cherished moment.

Lord Stanley's silver bowl may be 105 years old, but the Stanley Cup rings are from a later generation. In fact, they may well be considered the grandchildren of the award as they were first given to the members of the winning team sometime on the late fifties.

In those days, the players and the team shared the costs of producing the rings. In an era when player salaries were a far cry from what they are today, the decision to "get" a Stanley Cup ring was not as easy as it may seem and some players were faced with an important decision at the time.

Taking it for Grant... Ed!

Take Danny Grant for example. In 1967-68, Grant played 22 regular season games with the Montreal Canadiens and three more in the playoffs, thus becoming eligible to have his name inscribed on the Cup and to receive his golden memento. With today's standards, it should have been an easy decision to make, but for a young player earning the minimum salary it was not as simple. "I was getting married that summer and I was saving the money to pay for our wedding. Paying $700 for the ring would have meant no honeymoon and a very upset wife. I figured that at my age and playing on a winning team I would have a chance to win another one during my career, so I declined and got married," says Grant.

Life, however, is filled with surprises and it was no different for Grant. Two months later, he was traded to the Minnesota North Stars where he won the Rookie of the Year Award in 1969, but Grant never played on a Stanley Cup contender again.

qui célèbre, cette année, son 105^e anniversaire. C'est vers la fin des années cinquante que les bagues furent pour la première fois remises aux joueurs en guise de souvenir. Auparavant, la coupe était la seule preuve concrète de leur victoire.

Jadis, les joueurs et l'équipe partageaient les coûts de ces bagues. À une époque où l'échelle salariale était proportionnelle à celle des travailleurs, la décision de se "procurer" une bague de la coupe Stanley en était une qu'il fallait bien peser car il s'agissait d'une dépense substantielle.

Un "Grant" Dilemme

Le cas de Danny Grant est frappant. À sa première saison dans la LNH, en 1967-1968, Grant a disputé 22 matchs en saison régulière et trois autres en séries éliminatoires dans l'uniforme

A total of 15 teams have reached the Finals after posting regular-season records below the .500-mark, including the 1938 Stanley Cup champion Chicago Blackhawks (14-25-9) and the 1949 champion Toronto Maple Leafs (22-25-13).

Quinze équipes avec une fiche en deça de .500 en saison régulière ont déjà fait les frais de la finale de la coupe Stanley, dont les Blackhawks de Chicago de 1938 (14-25-9) et les Maple Leafs de Toronto (22-25-13) de 1949 qui ont remporté tous deux la coupe Stanley.

Hockey is not the only sport to reward its champions with rings. Baseball, basketball and football have all adopted that tradition. The NFL for example, has strict guidelines — including type of gold, diamond valuation and price — that must be followed when the rings are designed. One shank of the ring is designed for the depiction of the game itself and incorporates the game logo, location, date and participants. The other shank can be personalized to a greater extent. The finished product is a 30 pennyweight ring with a total of 140 points.

The NFL pays for 90 rings; any rings ordered above that are purchased by the club. The losing Super Bowl team is not left empty-handed. It also receives 90 pieces of selected jewelry, such as watches or rings, costing no more than half the price set for the winning team's rings!

Sens with Gems

There are currently 3 members of the Ottawa Senators who own Stanley Cup rings. They are Tom Chorske, with New Jersey in 1995, Sean Hill, with Montreal in 1993 and Shawn McEachern, with Pittsburgh in 1992.

Sean Hill's ring, as those of his former teammates, has a large number of distinctive features, which meant that Balfour, the manufacturing jeweler, had to design an individual mold for each of the 70 rings to be presented to the players and managers, especially because individual names are embossed on each ring. On one side, the ring features the Canadiens' logo along with Hill's name and number 38 which he wore with the Habs. The other side bears the inscription Canadiens de Montréal, the symbol of the Stanley Cup centenary and the number 24 for the Habs' 24th Cup. The top part of the ring represents the Stanley Cup and is set with of course, 24 diamonds. Additional diamonds adding up to 100 points are set around the ring to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the trophy. To highlight the team effort and input of all staff, the word "together" is engraved on the ring.

Each Stanley Cup ring passed through the hands of 40 employees; a different stage in the manufacturing of the ring for each time it changed hands. A total of 35 stages, including 11 mechanical phases, extended over a period varying from 6 to 8 weeks.

The Stanley Cup ring is more than just a unique jewel, unrivaled in the world, it's a symbol of success and greatness. IBC des Canadiens, devenant ainsi admissible à avoir son nom gravé sur la coupe et, bien sûr, à sa bague. Aujourd'hui, la question ne se pose même pas, mais il y a 25 ans, pour un joueur qui ne gagnait que le salaire minimum, la décision de déboursier 700$ pour une bague n'était pas... disons automatique. "J'étais sur le point de prendre épouse et j'essayais d'épargner autant d'argent que possible. Verser cette somme pour la bague aurait littéralement éliminé notre lune de miel, ce qui, avant même le mariage, aurait pu se transformer en cause de divorce, de dire Grant. Je me suis dit que j'aurais d'autres occasions de remporter la coupe Stanley et qu'à ce moment j'achèterais une bague. Je me suis donc marié."

Mais la vie est remplie de surprises et peu après son mariage, Grant était échangé aux North Stars du Minnesota où il fut voté la recrue par excellence du circuit en 1969, mais Grant n'a jamais plus eu la chance d'évoluer au sein d'une équipe qui aspirait à la coupe.

Le Blason des Sénateurs

Trois joueurs actuellement avec les Sénateurs d'Ottawa possèdent une bague de la coupe Stanley, chacun avec une équipe différente. Il s'agit de Tom Chorske, avec les Devils du New Jersey en 1995, de Sean Hill, avec les Canadiens de Montréal en 1993 et de Shawn McEachern avec les Penguins de Pittsburgh en 1992.

La bague de Sean Hill, comme celle de ses anciens coéquipiers, possède plusieurs caractéristiques propres qui ont fait en sorte que l'orfèvre Balfour ait dû créer un moule pour chacune des 70 bagues remises aux joueurs et membres de l'administration car le nom de chacun est gravé sur chaque bague. Sur un côté de la bague on retrouve le logotype des Canadiens avec le nom de Hill et le numéro 38 qu'il portait avec les Canadiens. De l'autre côté, on voit l'inscription Canadiens de Montréal, le symbole du centenaire de la coupe Stanley et le chiffre 24 représentant la 24e conquête de la coupe par les Canadiens. La partie supérieure qui représente la coupe Stanley est sertie de 24 diamants. D'autres pierres précieuses, portant le total à 100 points, ornent la bague pour commémorer le 100e anniversaire du calice d'argent. Pour mettre en évidence l'effort collectif et le travail de tous les membres du personnel, le mot

"together" est gravé sur la bague.

Chaque bague de la coupe Stanley passe dans les mains de 40 employés, chacun représentant une étape de la fabrication de la bague. Un total de 35 étapes sont nécessaires, dont 11 étapes mécaniques, durant la période de fabrication qui dure généralement entre six et huit semaines.

La bague de la coupe Stanley est plus qu'un joyau unique, elle est incomparable et symbolise le succès et la gloire. IBC

Silver Memories

De la coupe aux lèvres

The most revered figure in hockey is closing in on its one hundredth anniversary but remains the much-coveted prize of some 500 NHLers and millions of hockey fans alike. The silver chalice, designed by Lord Stanley to represent the ice hockey championship of the Dominion of Canada, now bears over 1,600 names all associated with dreams, outstanding performances and amazing anecdotes that would be music to most ears. If only the Cup could speak, it would take some 105 years to listen to these stories.

Of priceless value, hockey's most coveted award was once an ordinary punch bowl worth a mere ten guineas ($48.66 Canadian), in 1893 when one of Lord Stanley's aides in England, Captain Colville, purchased the goblet. Inflation and time did the rest! How much could the Cup be worth today! Well, as a point of reference, in 1974 it was insured for about $50,000.00.

To set the record straight, Lord Stanley never even attended a hockey game. Actually, his interest in hockey came from his two sons, Algernon and Arthur who played for a team called the Rideau Rebels and whose members came from the upper classes from officers corps stationed in Ottawa.

Lord Stanley, as Canada's Governor General, decreed that the Cup should be awarded to the best hockey team of the Dominion of Canada on the basis of a challenge. The team winning it would have to defeat the current holders.

GROWING PAINS

From 1893 to 1924, only the name of the victorious team was engraved on the Cup, but in 1924, two years before the trophy became the exclusive property of the NHL, the Montreal Canadiens broke with the tradition and had the names of all players on their roster engraved, thus starting what was to become a trend. Another Montreal based team broke the rule back in 1907 when the Wanderers had their name engraved on the inside of the top part referred to as the bowl.

The Habs' initiative was to have a major impact on the growth of the Stanley Cup. Technically, though, the Cup itself is just seven and one-half inch tall bowl and rests atop the three-tiered collar and widening shoulder, barrel and base. Over the years, the shape and supporting structure had changed dramatically to accommodate the growing number of names to be engraved.

In 1947, the Cup, which resembled a stove pipe with its 18 bands, underwent major changes as the bands were replaced with wider rings. Each new ring allows for 13 teams to be featured, until 1992 that is when the NHL decided upon removing the top ring, with the Stanley Cup winners from 1928 to 1940

Un siècle s'est écoulé depuis que Lord Stanley a fait don de la fameuse coupe qui, saison après saison, fait l'objet de tant de convoitise. Le calice d'argent est gravé de plus de 1 600 noms et d'un nombre incalculable de rêves, de performances et d'anecdotes que s'il pouvait parler, il en aurait pour au moins cent cinq ans.

Aujourd'hui, l'emblème de la suprématie du hockey n'a pas de prix, cependant à l'origine, il en coûta à peine 10 guinées (48,66$ en devise canadienne) au capitaine Colville, un des aides de Lord Stanley, pour se procurer ce qui était en fait un bol d'argent pour le punch. L'inflation et l'histoire se seront chargées du reste. À titre de référence, il importe de mentionner qu'en 1974, la coupe était assurée pour une somme de 50 000$.

Lord Stanley n'était pas un amateur de hockey. En fait, il n'a jamais assisté à un match de hockey. Son intérêt pour ce qui allait devenir le sport national du Canada provenait plutôt de ses fils, Algernon et Arthur qui évoluaient avec la formation des Rebels de Rideau composée de joueurs provenant de familles huppées basées à Ottawa. Lord Stanley, en sa qualité de gouverneur-général du Canada, déclara que le trophée devait être remis à la meilleure équipe de l'Association amateur de hockey après que cette dernière eut honoré les défis qui lui auraient été lancés.

COUPE EN EXPANSION

De 1893 à 1924, seul le nom de l'équipe gagnante et l'année étaient gravés sur la coupe. Mais en 1924, deux ans avant que le trophée ne devienne la propriété exclusive de la LNH, les Canadiens changèrent la tradition en inscrivant le nom de chacun des joueurs de leur formation sur la coupe. Auparavant, and add a new ring at the bottom of the barrel. The removed section is displayed on a permanent basis at the Hockey Hall of Fame in Toronto. The process is to be repeated in 2005 and every thirteen years thereafter.

LOOKING AFTER THE CUP

Does the name of Carl Petersen ring a bell? Understandably not! Under the edict of NHL President Clarence Campbell, Carl and his son Arno, have worked on the Cup and its replica year after year from 1949 to 1979. Surprised! You didn't think the players went around carrying the original award did you?

Since 1979, Montreal jeweler Doug Boffey has taken over the Petersens. The stamping process is still basically the same. First the Cup is disassembled from the top down. Special hammers with different headweights are struck against a letter punch to sink each letter 1/32th of an inch into the silver. A technique that requires dexterity and accuracy.

Polishing is a problem. If the Cup is rubbed or buffed too often the metal starts to disappear and the names before less legible. For this reason, it is cleaned as seldom as possible, every five years or so. The protective lacquer is stripped before the Cup is buffed and then re-lacquered. BC

FACT

Is the process expensive? Not really. In 1988, Boffey was paid $460.00 for his work while in 1947, Carl Petersen received $27.50 for his efforts. It takes Boffey about eight hours to complete the work where as the Petersens needed, they say, a mere three hours.

Each team gets about 17 square inches of space in which they squeeze their names. Obviously, the more people on it, the smaller the names get. The record is owned by the Edmonton Oilers in 1990 when they listed 46 names, five times as many as the MAAA 100 years ago. BC

EN BREF

En 1988, Boffey reçut 460$ pour ses efforts. En comparaison de 27,50$ pour Petersen en 1947. Contrairement à ce que l'on pourrait croire, il ne faut que huit heures à Boffey pour effectuer le travail.

Chaque équipe dispose de 17 pouces carrés pour y inscrire les noms des membres de l'organisation. Plus il y a de noms, plus les lettres seront petites. Le record appartient aux Oilers, en 1990, avec un total de 46 noms, soit cinq fois plus que le nombre de gagnants il y a 100 ans. BC une seule équipe avait osé déroger à la règle, soit les Wanderers en 1907, en faisant graver les noms à l'intérieur de la partie supérieure, soit le bol de la coupe.

Cette innovation a initié une croissance inattendue pour la coupe qui, dès lors, n'en finirait plus de grandir. Théoriquement, la coupe Stanley est ce bol d'une hauteur de 7 pouces qui repose sur les trois colliers à la base de ce qu'il est convenu d'appeler le baril. Au cours des années, la coupe a pris différentes formes pour accommoder le nombre croissant de noms gravés saison après saison.

En 1947, la coupe, qui commençait à ressembler à la Tour de Pise avec ses 18 anneaux, fut modifiée alors que l'on eut recours à des anneaux au diamètre plus grand. Par la suite, on ajouta un anneau par période de treize ans, du moins jusqu'en 1992, alors qu'à l'occasion de son centenaire, la coupe a "perdu" son anneau supérieur, où sont inscrits les noms des gagnants de 1928 à 1940. On a ainsi ajouté un anneau sur lequel seront apposés les noms des gagnants à chacune des 13 prochaines années. Le processus sera répété en 2005 et à chaque treize ans.

ORFÈVRES DE LA COUPE

La famille Petersen vous connaissez?

Depuis plus de 40 ans, Carl et son fils Arno s'appliquent chaque année à manucurer la coupe...et son sosie. Eh oui! Vous ne pensiez tout de même pas que c'est l'original que les gagnants paradedent un peu partout après leur ultime victoire! Depuis 1979, Doug Boffey, un orfèvre de Montréal, s'occupe de graver la coupe au moyen d'un procédé qui, en près de 40 ans, est demeuré sensiblement le même. D'abord, on démonte les différentes parties de la coupe. À l'aide de marteaux spéciaux, dont le poids de la tête varie selon la grosseur de caractère à graver, on enfonce un à un les espaces de la surface d'argent sur une matrice dont les lettres ont une dimension de 1/32^e de pouce. C'est un travail de grande précision qui requiert une grande dextérité. BC
